Health For All:

Connecting Health and Environmental Education

Health is the chain that links us all together. As the effects of climate change become more apparent in our everyday lives all across the globe, the importance of environmental health is placed into stark relief: The health of our environment has a direct impact on the health of people and our communities.

Environmental health requires environmental justice for all — equitable access to clean water and air, healthy soil and food, and stable climate and temperatures. Environmental education is the tool we use to educate our youth about each of these natural resources and human interaction with them.

When it comes down to it, environmental education (EE) is all about health. Students who are exposed to environmental education through curriculum, outdoor learning, school gardens, or Green Schools exhibit improved socio-emotional health — a greater ability to manage stress, stronger self-awareness and emotional agility, better ability to cope, and so on. Students learn to care for and engage in their communities through EE. They solve real-world problems through EE. They make the planet a healthier and more sustainable place for all life through EE.

Teaching environmental education is critical to improving the health and wellbeing of individuals, communities, and all living beings on Earth. Join us in inspiring today's teachers — those who provide critical education for tomorrow's leaders — by becoming a conference sponsor.

Make an impact on education in Kansas and Missouri — Sponsor the Conference! Educators across Kansas and Missouri are coming together for the 2022 Environmental Education Conference for inspiration, learning, and collaboration. This conference marks the first time we've been able to gather in person for a conference since 2019 — it's been a long 2+ years of virtual and modified teaching through the COVID-19 pandemic, and we look forward to treating educators to the best possible Kansas City experience. Your sponsorship helps make that happen!

Support the conference. Support educators.
